He stated that he had written two large laundry firms in Calgary and Nelson and that there was a splendid chance of the Albertan laundry commencing here. However he would rather see a local man get the first opportunity if it could be done and he would give every encouragement to Mr. Benson. If Mr. Benson is able to proceed with a steam laundry in all probability a lot will be provided for him.

The committee on a brick yard did not report. The matter was referred to the publicity committee.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETS

Salary of Fire Chief Discussed. Big Debate on Refund of Taxes.

The regular meeting of the town council took place on Tuesday in the council chamber. All present.

Clark—James—That the recommendation of the fire committee in regard to hiring of men be accepted. Carried.

The Chief has now greater powers.

The application of the Fire Chief for an increase of salary up to $500.00 was strongly opposed by Councillors Clark, Morrison and MacDonald. The Mayor also concurred in the idea that the increase was too great.

Councillor Shone came back with the reply that no applications were asked for when the present Fire Chief was appointed, and that the present application was the result of a wrong system of appointment.

Clark—Shone—That the application be rejected. Lost.

James—Holmes—That the application be referred to fire committee. Carried.

Morrison—Holmes—That the Fire Chief be granted at the rate of $100.00 a year, for last year, up to end of village, and at the rate of $175.00 from then on. Carried.

Communications from Supt. Uren of C. P. R. stating that agreement for road allowance to West Coleman will be hurried.

The Mayor stated that O. E. S. Whiteside will in the near future go to Edmonton to put forward the claims of the Prairie and Pass League.

Councillor Holmes reported on the lots in the east end to be used as a right-of-way. Deal will be satisfactory. He also stated that steps were being taken to establish a pound.

Clark—James—That report be accepted.

Councillor Morrison reported on the publishing of the by-laws.

An invitation was received from the Rosland Carnival Committee.

The thanks of the council will be sent.

A discussion took place on the payment of licenses.

McDonald—Morrison—That all licenses be left in the hands of the License Committee. Carried.

Tags for drays, dogs, etc., will be purchased immediately.

Dr. Porter sent in a report. He has prohibited the importation of ice from the Old Man river, near McLaren's mill, as dangerous from infection. He also gave a long and valuable report on the condition of many shacks, which he stated were in a most unsanitary condition. He advocated extending the water system to West Coleman.

A communication from Mrs. Hominick in refund of taxes.

This brought on a big debate re T. Steele. It was finally thought that T. Steele was deserving of a refund.

Morrison—James—That the application be referred to the Relief Committee. Carried.

Councillor Clark wanted the matter taken up at once, but motion was lost.

Communication from Blairmore in regard to incorporation Referred to Finance Committee

Councillor Shone complained of the building of shacks and stated that in future they should be prohibited.

The following accounts were passed:

Coleman Drug Co.	2 90
Goodeve Co. Ltd.	5 75
Coleman Miner	48 82
H. Villeneuve	3 50
Coleman Miner	12 80
E. Parrish	2 25

Holmes—James—That all accounts be paid. Carried.

Councillor Clark gave a report on the license committee. Total number of licenses, issued so far 139. Report was accepted and was complimented on by Mayor.

A telephone will be installed in the residence of the Clerk.

THE BEST MEDICINE FOR LITTLE ONES

The best medicine in the world for little ones is the medicine that will promptly cure all their little ills and at the same time can be given to the very youngest baby with absolute safety. Such a medicine is Baby's Own Tablets. They never fail to cure the ills of children and the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that they do not contain one particle of injurious drug. Concerning them Mrs. John Robertson, Streetville, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for constipation with the very best results. They are indeed a valuable medicine for little ones." The Tablets are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"BATESE" IN WINTER

LIFE IN THE LUMBER CAMPS APPEALS TO THE HABITANT.

The French-Canadian Peasant is a Personality Unequaled the World Over, and His Happy-go-Lucky Nature is Never so Well Suited as in the Winter Camp—It Means Money—Never Feels the Cold.

What particular quality there is connected with the Canadian Habitant which compels the admiration of every man, woman and child who comes into contact with this joyous spirit of the great northern forest is hard to explain. He is the soul of good nature, says one. He is happy personified, a combination of rough strength and tenderness, a child-like being for whom the dawning of each day opens up a new world of song and adventure, declare others. Somehow one wishes it were possible to combine all these characteristics into one word which alone would picture the nature of the most likeable being about whom some of the sweetest songs in the world are sung and some of the most thrilling stories told.

In the valleys of Quebec all through the golden summer the Habitants live with their wives and children, and for all that a stranger might know, are but simple farmers. Always jovial and deeply interested in their home life and families, to all appearances Jean and Pierre and all the rest of them are quite contented with their simple country existence. But visit these little isolated farms at the time of the year when the days are shortening and the first snow is falling and inquire for your old summer time friends. "Gone," the wives and little Habitant youngsters will tell you, smiling at your ignorance. "Everyone goes to the lumber camps." Not a man who can swing an axe or drive a team would miss his winter season in the big timber. For six long months they live in the brooding silence and eerie whiteness of the great Canadian forest. By instinct, by training, they love the woods; they love the work, and, for the most part, they love the life of the camps. The joyous, carefree life of the camps, where 50 or 60 men are housed under one roof, where the simple country life is served man which his lonely life on an isolated farm might be supposed to make him. On the contrary, he is particularly convivial and gregarious, and his social instinct is ministered to by the life in the crowded camp; where the hard work in the bitter cold is made more by about any other work, and where the long evenings are passed in the telling of tales and the singing of old Canadian roundels, as the men lounge in their bunkers, or rather in groups about the roaring box.

"Such a thing as a cold is absolutely unknown to the Quebec lumberman," says one. "I have never spent some time a winter or two ago in the Habitant camps, 'which goes to prove' that they are not to be had. These men dress no more warmly than we do in the latitude of New York; often go bare-headed, and perform their ablutions in the snow, which freezes on one surface while it melts on the other. Personal cleanliness is not their strong point, however. They are washed so clean inside by the eternal bath of oxygen in which they live that they have a fine scorn for the condition of their external man. Many of them do not undress during the entire winter. Personally I was unable to attain to this happy disregard for physical cleanliness—again, perhaps, because I did not remain long enough in camp. After sleeping in my clothes for a week I began to pine consciously for a bath."

"Fat pork is the one article of food in which the Habitants put greatest store. Venison which it may be said grows all round them is served as we reward bread, useful to fill in the chinks.
"In addition to pork the diet consists of pea soup (which is served by the quart), bread, apple sauce made of dried apples, and a rich molasses gingerbread. I certainly saw nothing else on the table during my stay; and I can bear witness that this menu, which under the best of conditions of civilized life would have wrecked my digestion in three days' time, proved at most satisfying and wholesome diet out here in the woods. The men seemed to crave no change of food, and they were a wonderfully rugged and sturdy lot."

There is one curious contradiction in the Habitant attitude towards his climatic surroundings. He shivers the cold out of doors, he will back willingly in a temperature of 90 degrees inside. He will roil in the night and be none the worse for it, apparently, in the morning.

"When in early May, the sudden Canadian spring comes to melt the vast accumulation of snow on the surrounding hills, these silent rivers are transformed into rushing floods and the logs thus set free start on their long journey to mills on the shores of the St. Lawrence, 40 or 50 miles away. This 'drift'—as it is called—is the supreme test of the wonderful vitality and endurance of the Habitants. For two or three weeks they work all day submerged to their armpits in icy water, battling with the interminable processions of floating logs; some coating and eating; ever watchful to prevent the dreaded 'jam,' which would tie up the whole harvest for a year. Then they lie down in their wet clothing to snatch a few hours' sleep, while another gang continues on during the night, for there must be no cessation of vigilance until the whole vast flood is floated safely down to the mill."

The New Remittance Man
Like last year, the Christmas sees several million dollars remitted to old England by British immigrants to Canada, who at this season send presents to relatives and friends still living in the old land. This is the new kind of remittance man Canada is growing, and it is a noble improvement on the British brand of the same name, even though some of the present remitters are from the ranks of the one-time British remittance men.—Ottawa Journal.

"You love long rambles in the country, don't you?" asked the impertinent young man. "Yes, indeed," responded the young lady in the hobble skirt. "When I go out in the country all nature seems to smile." "Gracious!" exclaimed the impudent youth. "I don't blame her. It's a wonder she don't laugh outright."

THE UNION BANK OF CANADA

The 46th Annual Statement the Best in its History

The 46th statement of the Union Bank of Canada, submitted at the annual general meeting of the shareholders, held on Saturday, December 17th, was a most satisfactory one. It shows a very liberal margin of profit over the amount required for dividends. In fact, the bank earned at the rate of 14 per cent. on the average paid-up capital, and as a result of the satisfactory earnings, increased their dividend from 7 to 8 per cent. The net profits for the year, after deducting expenses of management, interest due depositors, etc., amounted to $451,620. During the year $880,000 of new stock was issued at a premium of 25 per cent., amounting to $350,810. These two sums, together with the balance at the credit of the bank on November 30, 1909, amounted to $2,000,000, making a total of $4,000,000 available for distribution. This was apportioned as follows:

Three quarterly dividends at the rate of 1 1/2 per cent. and one at the rate of 2 per cent., a total of $500,000 transferred to the rest account, this sum being made up of premiums on new stock and $140,000 from the ordinary earnings; the sum of $1,000,000 transferred to officers' pension fund, leaving a balance of $80,000 to be carried forward. The paid-up capital now amounts to $4,000,000, being increased by $880,000 during the year, and the rest account now stands at $2,400,000, being also largely increased during the same period. An examination of the statement shows that the deposits not bearing interest amount to almost $15,000,000, or 25 per cent. of the total assets, during the year. This increase in the deposits not bearing interest indicates an increased capacity for profit on the part of the bank. The statement shows the bank to be particularly strong in cash reserves in gold and Dominion notes, which amount to nearly 13 per cent. of the total liabilities, and also that the assets immediately available, including stocks, debentures and call loans, are very nearly $15,000,000, or over 37 per cent. of the total liabilities.

The net profits for the year show a gain of $44,000 over the figures of the previous year and the total assets of the bank an increase of $5,000,000 during the same period. The total assets now amount to the large sum of $47,400,000, indicating that the bank has become one of the larger of our financial institutions. That it is serving the needs of the business community is shown by the fact that it has loans to business houses of over $30,000,000. Another indication of its growing importance in the country is the fact that during the year 37 branches or agencies of the bank have been opened. Altogether the showing of the bank is the best in its history and reflects the highest credit upon the president, board of directors and general management.

MADE IN CANADA ROYAL BEST CAKES MOST PERFECT MADE

THE QUIVERING EARTH.

Our Globe Frequently Trembles Like a Mass of Jelly.

Among the astonishing discoveries that have recently been made by means of the delicate instruments contrived primarily for the investigation of earthquakes more is more surprising than that of the existence of vast quiverings of the earth's crust which affect tens of thousands of square miles of surface and sometimes continue for weeks on end. These strange pulsations, which are called "microseisms," are due, incredible though it may seem, to nothing else than the varying pressure of the air!

Who could have believed that the seemingly solid globe could be thus shaken by the soft tread of the invisible powers of the atmosphere? But the mystery is deepened by the fact, which stands out clearly from the investigations of Dr. Otto Klotz, that the ocean plays a master part in the phenomenon. When an area of low barometric pressure passes across the United States no microseisms are produced as long as the cyclone remains distinctly over the continent, but when it runs out upon the surface of the ocean the needles of the seismographs begin to tremble.

These strange movements affect blocks of the earth's crust so large that their surface, already remarked, covers tens of thousands of square miles. Over these immense areas the solid earth trembles like a jelly, and the motion, instead of passing away rapidly, as in an earthquake, continues day after day and week after week. Microseisms are most common in winter. But whenever a well marked low pressure area sweeps over the earth, a storm center—sweeping up the Atlantic coast from Florida to the Gulf of St. Lawrence—the tremors begin. Dr. Klotz has shown that it is not the surface wind that produces these disturbances, but the change of pressure. Yet the winds and the tides, too, have their effects, which can be clearly distinguished from the true microseisms.

This adds another to the many sources of disturbances which affect the stability of the earth. Every fresh investigation brings new proof that the earth is an astonishingly high strung organism. Its ribs of rock, as rigid as steel in the interior, responding like the struts of a harp to the slightest touch. And we, microscopic creatures, dwell upon its globe of stretched and living struts—Garrett P. Serviss in New York American.

Selling a Book.

At the last dinner of the American Bookellers' association one of the souvenirs was a paperweight which contained this rubricated text: "To receive a book is an easy task; it requires only pen and ink and some patient paper. To print a book is slightly more difficult, because genius often expresses itself in illegible manuscript. To read a book is the most difficult, as one must struggle against sleep. But the most difficult task that any one may attempt is to sell a book." The Harpers presented the paperweight, but the sentiment belongs to one of the most prolific modern writers, Felix Dahn, a man who, moreover, never sold a book in his life. He is a German novelist, historian, jurist and playwright and has written half a hundred works of all sorts.—Argonaut.

A New Death Dealer.

The recently invented Benet-Mercier gun combines the rapidity of fire, range and effectiveness of a machine gun with the lightness and ease of action of a magazine rifle. The gun is fired from a rest and is held against the shoulder of the man who fires either from a sitting position or lying prone. The regulation cartridge is used in clips that hold fifty. A good rifleman can discharge from 200 to 300 shots per minute if assisted in feeding by a man to fill the clips. The gun is at present undergoing a series of tests by army officers with a view to its adoption by the government.—Popular Mechanics.

Horses and the British Army.

The British army on mobilization will require 125,000 horses, and no one has the slightest idea where they can be found. Good authorities tell us that this number of animals of the military grade does not exist in the country. With the growth of mechanical transport the necessity of taking steps to secure a supply of horses in war grows more and more urgent. We can not, unfortunately, mount our cavalry on taxicabs, or use still breed can beat horses in the world, but they are bought up for the use of foreign armies while the British war office is counting its pence.—London Mail.

The Perishability of Riches

One of the facilities which the provisions of the Canadian Government Annuities Act affords, is that given to old people of investing their capital with absolute security and safety, and with a much greater return than any other form of investment will give them. A woman of 80 years of age who is living in one of the small villages in Ontario, and who has outlived all her near relatives, has a deposit in the Saving Bank of $1,500, which is all that remains of a very considerable fortune left her by her husband, who predeceased her nearly fifty years ago. This amount is earning her an income of $45 a year, which, needless to say, is not sufficient to provide her with the necessities of life, and the poor house would ultimately have been her only destiny, as in a little less than six years she would have spent the remainder of her capital, as her living expenses are over $300 a year. One day the little booklet "Comfort and Happiness," found its way into this lady's hands. She perused it carefully and considered its statements thoughtfully, and with the result that she is advised to transfer her $1,500 to the Government. She will then receive an income of $228 every year instead of $45, and the probability is that her life will be very much extended. Certainly her happiness and comfort while she lives will be increased, as the difference of $243 a year in her income will mean to her all the difference between poverty and affluence. She may live to be 100 her paternal grandfather did.

RAIDED

The houses, which are occupied by the inhabitants of the underworld, were raided by two of the license inspectors on Saturday night. On Monday morning the mistresses of the demi mondes came before Inspector Belcher at Blairmore and were fined heavily. A similar fine is made every six months and in reality constitutes a license. The charge was for selling liquor without a license.

Publicity

The formation of a publicity department by the Board of Trade is a step that follows closely the incorporation of our town and the simultaneous upbuilding of our industries. That a publicity committee plays an important part in the establishment of industries, etc., is instanced by Calgary, Nelson and Vancouver.

What is most essential besides experienced publicity men, is money the "sinews" of advertising. The town council will be approached on the matter and it is safe from this distance to say, that they will not turn a deaf ear to the proposal.

The citizens of Coleman who have invested in stock and property are most anxious that the town should advance. The "waiting for opportunity plan" is a faded art and only the live town with live progressive builders can hope in these times to survive with their healthy neighbors. The property holders demand a wide general policy of publicity.

Too Late

As usual, the British tariff reformer has been found napping again. His recent fright over the reciprocity agreement is a striking answer to the apathy shown by the British electorate towards imperial free trade. It is not to be expected that Canada, long suffering as she has been, can endure the tremendous increase in the cost of living. The certainty of the agreement being ratified by both popular branches of the legislature of both countries, is sufficient proof that reciprocity became a necessity. The farmers of Western Canada in a pilgrimage that startled Ottawa, made clear their views on tariff wall breaking.

An imaginary line divides two political nations. The soil on either is the same. Mines are operated both sides, some with no distress, others from lack of suitable fuel. Is it right that this thin, airy, imaginary line should velvet the pockets of the financial magnate? A free intercourse of commodities lessens the cost of production, lessens the cost of living.

The Imperial Conference should consider a stronger preferential tariff within the empire, if trade relations are to continue flourishing.

Dear Sir—I understand that a movement is on foot to have a Curfew by-law passed. It seems almost incredible that such a law was not passed years ago. We look to Councilor McDonald to introduce this by-law at the next meeting of the council.

Thanking you, I remain

NOTE AND COMMENT

Laurier never swaps horses in the middle of a stream. He goes across to the other side and takes the pasture.

Hon. Clifford Sifton wants a side show all to himself.

J. Angus McDonald, late candidate in the last election, writes to H. Mathieson as follows:

The Greenwood Ledge has a wholesale compilation of weird facts, which, when dissected separately, are quite reasonable.

Ski shaped hats will be worn next winter.

One of Coleman's young trustees gave a Blairmore young lady a ring last week. It was given over the telephone.

There is great interest being taken in the contest for the prize offered by W. H. Murr for the promoter who brings a laundry to town.

Under the new reciprocity agreement, different sections of each country will produce at a lessened cost, that which is particularly adaptable for them to produce.

There is no duty on or duty for bacteria.

The C. P. R. won the first round of the bout for the land taxes. In twenty years another match will be held under better conditions.

A pound, a pound, a town pound for a horse!

The Prairie is again faced with a coal famine. Several of the papers there place the responsibility on the railways, others, on mine owners. But are not the coal dealers and the farmers a little to blame themselves in not providing fuel for at least one month in advance.

It is to be hoped that a "refund" ticket will not be nominated at the next municipal election.

Some people hate criticism. They call it abuse and libel, not thinking that a public official is open for just criticism and valuable suggestions.

An attack of the grip is often followed by a persistent cough, which to many proves a great annoyance. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been extensively used and with good success for the relief and cure of this cough. Many cases have been cured after all other remedies had failed sold by all dealers.

Dear Sir—I see by your paper that the new Compulsory School Act has come into force. Now Sir, has any action yet been taken by the School Board in regard to enforcing the act in this town. Have those children under 14 in the town been compelled yet to go to school? An investigation would result in proving that only 75 per cent of the children in the school age are attending school. This is a most regrettable state of affairs and should be remedied at once by appointing a capable truancy officer.

The Result of a Lecture

A Young Professor Gets Off His Beat on the Subject of Love

By EVAN HARRINGTON

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

I was but twenty-eight years old when I was elected to the chair of mental philosophy in the University of B., a woman's college. I was given to rationalism, materialism and all that group of laus propter at the time and was fond of employing them in my lectures to my classes. I dictated these lectures, and they were given down by the students in blank books. I was lecturing one morning, my subject leading me into something at which the girls pricked up their ears. This was the passage that attracted their attention:

Music is an appeal to the fancy, exciting the imagination to a pleasant, now soothing the listener into a pleasant languor, as in the case of a lullaby, now stirring the passions, as in the case of martial strains. All our emotions are based on such influences. Love, then, is a more direct appeal to be excited in the same way. The imagination is operated on by its own images. When the circumstances are attractive love is produced; when they are disagreeable, hate is produced. Love once excited may absorb one's whole being, but that it is not in itself spiritual—in other words, eternal—must be clear from the fact that it is manifestly a part of the material world, as the Indian custom of the wife's immolation on the funeral pyre of her husband would be a necessity.

There was no sound in the room except my monotonous dictation and during the pauses at the end of every half dozen words the ripple of the hand-drawn pen points on as many lecture books. I was a bit uneasy at this portion of my discourse, fearing the girls might do or say something that would embarrass me. I was about to proceed after the last word, "necessity," when Kate Swann, the chief mischief-maker in the class, laid down her pen and rose from her seat.

"May I ask, professor," she said demurely, while her eyes snapped viciously, "does a sense of justice pertain to the subject we are studying?"

"Then if love were eternal would it not be just that the husband should immolate himself on the funeral pyre of his wife as well as the wife on the funeral pyre of the husband?"

"The husband?" she asked. "Man," I said, with an affection of modesty for my sex, "is not supposed to be endowed with the power of stockholding, low proclivities as woman. This is because he is not as emotional. Nevertheless I grant that if love were spiritual, which I consider to be the case as eternal, a husband might find his wife might do well to end his mourning on the funeral pyre of his wife."

"You mean then, professor, I suppose," pursued the mischievous girl, "that it would be a necessity on the part of a widow to end her mourning, a man under similar circumstances might do well to thus imitate himself."

I was in for it. The satire was delicate, but sufficiently biting to be understood by Miss Swann's classmates. Their faces were turned up to me, each wearing a tantalizing smile and all expecting my rejoinder. I resolved to silence the young lady by a compliment.

"I am quite sure, Miss Swann," I said, "that if you were a widow and proposed to end your earthly existence on your husband's funeral pyre a mob of bachelors would prevent it."

Amid another lecture, this time not at my expense, I signified that the discussion was ended by proceeding with my dictation. Unfortunately there was a lot more in my lecture on what I called the emotion of love, and I feared that Miss Swann or some other member of the class would trip me up again. I would have omitted the rest were it not that I could not do so and preserve the continuity of my lecture. I was not long in striking a passage that brought about more trouble:

That the emotion is human instead of divine is indicated by the fact that a love which has existed for years may turn hate. Again it may be lost, indeed, without any other mental faculty, memory, it cannot continue even through life. There are many instances where, the faculty of memory having been destroyed, the love have not even been cognizant of those they have loved. As the brain is a storehouse of memories, it is a storehouse of photographs, so to speak.

I stopped. I realized that I might as well fire a cannon at the antagonistic side to woman's nature as finish the sentence.

"Go on!" cried every one in the room. "—a conglomerate union of emotions produced by the perceptive faculties of an organic brain."

Another groan was mingled with the sound of scribbling. To escape from a situation which I considered appalling I closed the book from which I had been dictating and, rising, bowed a demure to the class. Half the girls had risen to buy books or to attend the lecture being ended, they were unable to do so. A dozen came to my desk with defiance in their eyes; but, taking up my hat, I said with a smile: "Pardon me, young ladies, I have a commitment at this hour, and to be on time I must go at once."

That was the last lecture delivered before that class. I knew that a sense of indignation had been kindled, and I feared would meet me on my next entry into the class room. Rather than subject myself to such a fire I resolved to resign my professorship. I did so and left at a midnight train, giving as a reason for my sudden action and departure that I had discovered on myself what I considered to be symptoms of insanity and not for worlds would I communicate the disease to any one else. The University of B. never saw me again. Indeed, I never returned, and I devoted myself to original research. I learned afterward that had I not resigned voluntarily I would have been invited to do so, my lectures being considered by the corporation altogether too materialistic for a Christian college.

Ten years after the severance of my connection with B. university I was invited by my friend Joe Arnold to make one of a house party at his country seat during the autumn. I accepted and found on arrival the company all present. My coming had been announced, and I had been kind enough to speak a good word for me. I was awaited with pleasant anticipations. On arrival I was introduced to all the party of college friends. Among the ladies a Helen Phillips seemed most attractive to me, but I considered myself a confirmed bachelor, was devoted to the colonization of bacteria and had no idea of marriage. But Miss Phillips, instead of being content to show partiality for her or not, as I liked, took me in charge, so to speak, and it was not long before I noticed a disposition on the part of the other ladies to the party to consider me her especial cavalier.

For the first time in my life I fell under the spell of a captivating woman. I had never experienced the emotion called love. All I knew about it was what I had expressed in a few passages in my lectures such as I have cited, and in my subsequent work I had forgotten the fact that I was a young man whose antipathy I had excited by my materialistic views had scattered, and many of them had become mothers. I had never heard of one of them. I had been forty-seven instead of twenty-seven doubtless I should not have been so sensitive.

But this Miss Phillips—she never tired of listening to my theories, and I was rather a listener than a talker. She gave no ideas of her own, asked no questions, paid the strictest attention to what I said, and when I announced a triumph in my work I received indications of my heartfelt sympathy. Then came a time when she began to look at me with a certain amount of interest. I paid her a compliment, to tremble a little I was impatient with her.

Why multiply these symptoms of the tender passion? I had begun to feel as sure that love was growing up in the bosom of Miss Phillips as I was that I was in love with her. But, foolishly giving vent to my confidence, she swept away from me like a queen, leaving me a shattered wreck. A suppliant, one evening while sitting with her before a fire of blazing logs I told her of my love.

"What is love, professor?" she asked. "Love," I said, "is why, love is that sweet sympathy which exists between man and woman."

"Eternal?"

"I never thought so before, but now I do. 'I'm sure it is.'"

"Will you love me forever?"

"Forever."

"Enough to go with me when I go?"

"Where?"

"She related to the heavens."

"The world would be a horror after you were gone."

"I believe in immortality."

"I'm not opposed to it, but what?"

"The man I marry must make me a promise."

"What promise?"

"To be incinerated with me when I die."

I stared at her in blank amazement. "On that condition I will be yours."

Memory is a curious faculty. Scenes will be dormant there for many years to be called out by a word or an incident pertaining to them. This incineration business called up that combat of words with one of my pupils ten years ago. For the first time I felt something familiar in Miss Phillips.

"You are?" I began, but stopped. I had forgotten the name I wanted.

"I am?" Her lips broke into a smile. "The girl who quizzed me in the lecture room?"

"I am Kate Swann."

"And as full of the devil as ever?"

"I'm not opposed to the way you lectured on love that if it were ever my good fortune to meet you I would make you eat your words. When I heard that you were expected here I knew my opportunity was at hand. I told the others that for certain reasons best known to myself I desired to be incinerated with you, and I meant to be."

"Are they in the secret of your reason?" I asked.

"No."

"There was a silence between us. I was conscious of having been duped, and that I was not a pleasant sensation."

"Well," I said at last coldly, "you have won a famous victory."

"I looked up at me with an expression of a woman who desires to appease one she has offended, a semi-compassionate, semi-encouraging glance."

"What is all the purpose you have stated?" I added.

"The glance sank to the floor, and I took her in my arms."

PAINTED THE BUST.

Carataker Rinsed Statuette of Laura Second and Caused Sensation.

Drummond Hill Cemetery—or, as it is known to tourists, the battleground of Lundy's Lane—has undergone a remarkable and pleasant change since it passed under the proprietorship of the Queen Victoria Niagara Falls Park Commission. The rank growth of wild shrubs, weeds, and tall grass has been cut away, bare spots sodded, walks of finely crushed stone laid, and an ornamental fence encloses this at one time, most utterly neglected and reproachful of all God's acres in the province.

Many neglected graves have been made to look as though they received decent remembrance—graves of military patriots, soldiers, and statesmen have been marked, and even the far-distant corner pointed out as "Parker's Field," where the unknown dead gathered from the river, lie in unmarked graves, has been made less forlorn looking, and more like a place where they busy human beings.

Towering stones, moss-grown and leaning with fearful slant, have been straightened up, cleaned, and both mound and depression made one common level.

All this work has been done under the supervision of the time-honored sexton of Drummond Hill cemetery, a man of excusable pride in his work. He has bestowed special pains upon one historic spot—sacred to him as it is to all—up the grave of Laura Phillips, and in his zeal precipitated the one grim tragedy of the work of "recreation" that will haunt him to his death.

The sexton did not like the looks of the dull bronze, which he gazed at with a frown. He did not sufficiently admire, perhaps, "sculptured marble and enduring bronze," to appreciate its classic significance—not then, but he decided to make a change in the complexion of not only the face, but the whole. He marked the resting place of the heroine of Beavertown—to improve, he thought, the appearance of the monument. He did not know that the light-colored stone was a beautiful limestone. He painted the figure of the woman in white, and the drapery of the figure in a light blue. The effect was startling.

When the last stroke of this new paint was laid, the sexton, who had been drawn over by the surprised-looking features of the heroine the sexton stepped back and admired his handiwork. He called several friends to see the transformation. Most of them came to admire and to praise his handiwork. The sexton was not prepared for criticism, and he exulted in the school of art. In vain he pointed out the advantages over wear and tear his hand-applied paint gave in the storm of disapproval which was his lot.

Passersby on the street below the rise of ground on which the memorial stands would stop and look in wonderment at the unusual change that had come over the figure. They climbed the fence for closer inspection, and joined the crowd that was growing up, and it was not a very solemn crowd at that.

When the shades of night fell there was a falling off in the attendance. The sexton, who had shed his pale light on the scene, and this only heightened the ghostly effect and increased the prejudice against the sexton's artistic temperament.

Seeing that the change was so decidedly objectionable, and by this time the sexton was a little disheartened, he decided to undo his work. He called several friends to see the transformation. Most of them came to admire and to praise his handiwork. The sexton was not prepared for criticism, and he exulted in the school of art. In vain he pointed out the advantages over wear and tear his hand-applied paint gave in the storm of disapproval which was his lot.

When he set down, leaving all those at the table duly edified, his son, who had enjoyed the privileges of the wealthy, followed him to a dining saloon in which he referred to the first speaker. "I am a chip off the old block," he announced.

"I'm not opposed to the way you lectured on love that if it were ever my good fortune to meet you I would make you eat your words. When I heard that you were expected here I knew my opportunity was at hand. I told the others that for certain reasons best known to myself I desired to be incinerated with you, and I meant to be."

"Are they in the secret of your reason?" I asked.

"No."

"There was a silence between us. I was conscious of having been duped, and that I was not a pleasant sensation."

"Well," I said at last coldly, "you have won a famous victory."

"I looked up at me with an expression of a woman who desires to appease one she has offended, a semi-compassionate, semi-encouraging glance."

"What is all the purpose you have stated?" I added.

"The glance sank to the floor, and I took her in my arms."

"DISCOVERY."

A Contrivance That Mothers Will Heartily Appreciate.

THEY'RE FOUND IN MENUS.

Delicacies About Which the Average Woman Has Only a Hazy Notion—A Patient Permitted to Talk of Aliments.

Dear Elsie—I know how it annoys you to have the children throw things about their hats, caps and toys—so while staying with a friend recently I hit upon a "discovery" that you will appreciate and probably adopt for your own comfort. The three harum scarum boys in my friend's family called the contrivance the "tidy-tun." What was it? Nothing more impressive than a small barrel their mother has standing in her hall closet corner. It is a trifling affair that saves her much trouble and many steps; besides, it teaches the boys the value of tidiness. The little barrel has a square of stout wadding cloth drawn tightly over it, held in place by the upper barrel hoop. In this cloth are two eight-inch crosscuts which will easily admit good sized articles of all sorts, but through which it would be well nigh impossible to fish them out again.

Into this barrel are slipped all the belongings left littering up the bedrooms or found scattered in dining room and living room after the youngsters have gone for school or gone to bed. In the tidy-tun they remain in spite of the direst need and forlorn pleadings until the monthly thorough sweepings day come around when the tidy-tun is opened and the contents

A FINE WEDDING GOWN.

Contributed to the delinquent owner's promise to be less disorderly at month.

Many are the favorite pencils and pens used by the busy woman, which, swallowed up by the tidy-tun, are saved from the anguish of the land where his property disappear therein. But the little barrel is not alone in this game. The mother told me, in laudatory tones of tidiness in the household.

What They Are.

In answer to your desire for the information regarding some of the delicacies which are often referred to in menus and recipes about which you are rather hazy in your mind, I would say that you are not alone in this gastronomic fog. Most women know in a general way about all of these things, but here is a little additional information for you concerning them.

Cherries, for instance, is a small fish which comes from the Mediterranean. It is freed from bones, split and salted and put up in glass jars and is called filled of anchovy. It has a high flavor and is used as an appetizer or as a garnish for some salads.

Caviar is another highly flavored delicacy used as an appetizer. It is made from the roe of certain large fish, which are preserved by salting. It is served on small pieces of toast with finely chopped onion and minced hard boiled egg and lemon.

Cherries is a garden herb like young parsley. It is of a delicious flavor and may be used in salads and soups.

Chives are still green onion tops with solid flavor. They are excellent for flavoring soups, sauces and some kinds of cheese.

Truffles are a species of fungus which are found only in the earth, they grow several inches underground and when fresh have a strongly aromatic flavor. They are usually sold in cans or glass bottles.

"Turkey is an East Indian hot sweet pie made from coconut, chillies and other articles."

Curry powder is a yellow powder, the principal ingredient of which is turmeric. It is a product of India and is a rich seasoning for Indian dishes, such as curry of chicken, lamb, lobster, and so forth. Here endeth the first lesson.

For Women's Nerves.

Did you ever hear of so many women breaking down nervously as they do at the present time? Well, yesterday I went to see one of the latest of my neurasthenic acquaintances and found that she had gone to a sanatorium where women receive something of the same kind of treatment that is given the men at the Muldoon's establishment in New Jersey. Every day the women patients assemble in the gymnasium and cure their nervous nerves by exercises which, in the case of the most proficient, culminate in standing on their heads, vaulting the "horse" or walking on their hands, according to the strength of the pupil.

The patients are taught to breathe. The opening ceremony is called "pumping," which is a sort of abdominal breathing. Even patients too ill to leave their beds are taught to lie there and "pump."

The director claims that half the nervous troubles of womenkind are caused by inefficient breathing and that if the lungs are allowed an opportunity to purify the blood many ailments will be benefited. In the same way he gives particular attention to the muscles of the abdomen. With this end in view comes the "scissors" exercise. The patient, it seems, lies at full length on one side and makes her legs resemble a most active pair of scissors. After the gymnasium a period of rest follows, which the patients use in playing tennis, boating and swimming. The real fun of the day begins when the patients assemble for circus tricks in the ring.

Besides this, there are long country walks, for the "Muldoon's for women" is located on an estate of nearly 100 acres, and no matter how poorly one of the guests may feel, with all the outdoor life she cannot cease to look like an invalid and, better still, ceases to remember that she is one.

At mealtime there is no special regimen for any one to follow, I am told. It is permitted to discuss her ailments or miseries with any other patient at meal or any other time. Possibly this is one of the reasons that these invalids recover so quickly.

An amusing suggestion for the wedding gown of the business girl you know who has little to spend on her trousseau. It is developed in this crepe de chine, with an overdress of chiffon trailing over the waist and finishing in points with tassels of silk and pearl beads. Fine lace trims the waist and sleeves and looks very delicate underneath the silky chiffon. The gown fits closely and is narrow even at the bottom of the skirt. The satin forms the girdle and is also knotted around the short sleeves. Gowns may be made for $15.75 as counted up by

Old Gowns Made Over.

Don't consign last year's gowns to the scrap heap! Make it over! That is, exert a little ingenuity and add a little new material and thereby evolve a new frock.

The process gown can play the part of a foundation for this year's model. Drape the bodice or net or chiffon over the bodice. Introduce a new yoke and sub-cuffs. Incorporate a square of lace with the material and embroff with dots and beads.

Slip a gathered straight tunic over the skirt and edge it with a band of net or satin. Repeat the embroidered motif at the bottom of the skirt and on the bodice, adding a touch here and taking away a piece there.

Never let a frock of other days go to waste. You can always build a new one on the old foundation.

One dress may be covered with a kimono slip of chiffon. Lace can be used for tunics or for underslips; silk can be combined with tulle or net. You need only keep your eyes wide open, and with a quick hand you can construct a new dress.

It is quite like the promise made to Aladdin to exchange old lamps for new, isn't it?

It's Sanitary, This Kitchennette. Kitchennette apartments are the natural and logical outgrowth of the demand for home life by people of some means. They are not only convenient but they are inviting enough to mean homes to people who otherwise might be forced into boarding houses or the furnished room life, both of which have many drawbacks and are waiting in real comfort. The housewife, though mistress of an entire house, may gather some good points for her kitchen from the kitchennette illustration in Good Housekeeping, with its tiled floors and walls, porcelain sink and marble topped table.

Pear Salad.

Pare and remove the cores from large ripe pears. Fill the centers with a mixture of chopped celery, English walnut meats and mayonnaise dressing. Arrange around the edge of a round, flat salad dish and fill the center with cream cheese which has been mixed with cream and forced through a blue potato ricer.

FAMOUS FIGHTER DEAD

JEM MACE WAS LAST OF ENGLISH CHAMPIONS.

Celebrated Pugilist, Who Beat Tom King. After Forty-Three Rounds, and Held the Belt For Ten Years, Made a Million Dollars in His Day But Lost It All—Fought Nearly Five Hundred Battles.

Jem Mace, the last of the famous old champions of the English prize ring, died in England the other day. Mace was in his 70th year and old age was the cause of his death. Jem was born in Norfolk and it was asserted that he was of gypsy extraction.

JEM MACE.

but this he denied. He claimed the championship of England when Tom Sayers retired in 1863. But Tom King contested his claim and the two fought for the title. Mace beat King in 45 rounds and held the championship for a decade. He had fought in all nearly 500 battles, including bouts in America and Australia. Mace made $1,000,000 during his day, but lost it all. Later he had been dependent upon the charity of his friends. Despite his age he was a wonderfully well preserved athlete almost to the last.

Cut Out Tobacco In Winter.

Smoking has a much worse effect on the majority of people in winter than in summer, according to a famous London physician. He advises all smokers who find their health and mental faculties impaired in winter to become more temperate in their smoking. He says that the reason is that the cold air causes the expansion of the lungs, which eventually produces quicker results. It is a powerful drug, and cannot be consumed in large quantities without producing a certain effect on the system. It also has a most potent effect on the heart. First it slows the action, then it quickens it, and then it produces a reaction which eventually produces quicker results.

It must be remembered that during the winter the heart has a great deal more work to do than in summer, for the cold causes the blood vessels to contract, and the reaction produced by tobacco is felt to a much greater degree. And you cannot continue overworking your heart without unpleasant results.

Since the effect of tobacco varies with the individual, the physician concludes it is not invariably a case that smoking has a worse effect in winter than in summer. But it undoubtedly is so with a large proportion of people.

White Elephant Another Color.

About fifty wild elephants are captured near Nan, in Siam, every year, and are trained in the vicinity. Although it is called the Land of the White Elephant a true albino tusker is a most rare rarity. The whites they have is merely light colored or spotted. The so-called white elephant is only a little lighter than the ordinary one. One of the most satisfactory to the Siamese in recent years was a light brown, with some white in his hair. There are records, however, which show that probably real white elephants have been caught. Back in the eighties a European circus came to Bangkok with a white elephant, but the paint came off, and there was much public indignation. The elephant died a few days later, "the judgment of Buddha," said the Siamese, whose duty it was to supply him with food—Robert Blair, in The Christian Herald.

Whistler's Concept.

Whistler's amusing personal conceits was charmingly displayed on one occasion when A. G. Flower, a London politician, attended a private view at the Grosvenor gallery. "Almost the first friend I met," he said, "was Whistler, and he very good naturedly took me to a full length portrait which he was exhibiting of Lady Archibald Campbell. After I had done my best to express a humble appreciation of a beautiful picture I asked him if there were any other pictures which he would advise me to look at. 'Other pictures,' exclaimed Whistler, in a tone of horror. 'Other pictures! There are no other pictures! You are through!'"

Athletic Cup on "Knockout" Plan.

Cambridge University Athletic Club of England will provide a challenge cup which is to be competed for each college on the "knockout" plan. This means that each college will hold its sports as usual, but will at the same time play against some other British college. At Oxford, too, it has been found that there is a lack of keenness about competitions closed to any one of the many colleges there.

Correspondence

Coleman, Alta.

Feb. 10, 1911

That Coleman-Bairmore hockey match which the Editor of the Blairmore Enterprise is still worrying about. Yes, the receipts were small, and could have been smaller, had he been permitted to pass three persons as representatives of his valuable paper. But the "Chief" at the door he refused, would not allow so small and cheap a trick. Probably the following will explain in how small and cheap a person the Editor is. One would think by his actions, that the Honorable positions which he holds as Editor of that large and most valuable paper, that he and his friends should be entitled to pass free the world over.

The following was left by the so called gentlemen as a tip to the waitress of one of the leading hotels of the Pass, after he had been permitted to enter the dining room after hours with a friend for his Xmas dinner.

Now, Mr. Editor, if you wish the public to know any more, as to who is the cheapest and smallest man, yourself or the Sec. of the Coleman Hockey Club, just you keep knocking him and you will get more.

Yours, etc.

Sec. COLEMAN HOCKEY CLUB.
